DALIAN

- The Xinghai Square was built in 1997 to commemorate the return of Hong Kong to China. In the center of the square you can see a Huabiao pillar. These numerals remind the year of 1997 when Hong Kong was returned to China. A dragon is carved on the pillar with another 8 dragons as the base. All dragons symbolize the development of Chinese nation (descendants of a dragon). A jade stone is found erected in the square and the red marble stone covered with 12 animals Chinese horoscope. On the other side of a Xinghai Square, there is a gigantic white-stoned revealing book. It was erected in honor of a hundred-year-old Dalian and it symbolizes all historical events of Dalian.

NANPU

- The West Sea Barrage is located 10 mi./15 km. from Nampo itself. The barrage, or dike, stretches for 5 mi./8 km. across the Taedong River estuary separating the salt water from the fresh water. Completed on June 24, 1986 after five years of construction by soldiers of the Korean Peoples Army, the barrage has three locks capable of handling 2,000 to 50,000 ton ships, 36 sluice gates, a swing bridge, a railway and a highway. The barrage today provides water for irrigation, industrial uses and drinking. It is also provides a scenic traffic route along the coast. The main dam also has three fish ladders to permit the movement of fish between the fresh and salt water.

SHENYANG

- Shenyang Imperial Palace - an excellently well-preserved cultural relic. Although it is considered a miniature of the Forbidden City in Beijing, the Palace by comparison is smaller in scale. The Manchurian influence can be seen from its architecture, and shows a vast departure in style from its predecessor. This palace covers an area of 60,000 square meters, comprising over 20 courtyards, 300 houses and 70 buildings.

PYONGYANG

- Pyongyang Subway: This project was instigated by General Kim Jong Il in 1966 while on a visit to Beijing, where construction of that city's subway was underway. Work began on both lines in 1968 with Soviet and Chinese help. It is the deepest Subway System which go as deep as 200 meters and with the average of 100 meters. It also served the purpose of air-raid shelter.
- The Arirang Mass Performance is a highlight of any trip to North Korea. It is sometimes erroneously called the "Mass Games" but it is not a game, there are no teams, no winner, no losers, only beautiful and artistic performers. There is no other show like this in the world causing it to be included in the Guinness Book of Records. The program consists of several "acts", each with several "scenes". Each scene features a backdrop consisting of over 20,000 middle school students from a half-dozen local schools on one side of the stadium using large colored cards to create beautiful backdrop images. The result looks like a giant pixilated photograph.

MT.MYOHYANG

- MT.Myohyang is 1,909m high, and is named Mt. Myohyangsan because of its strange and beautiful shape. The average temperature is 8.3°C. There are a wide variety of plants as well as rare animals. Historically the mountain is significant because in 1592 (25th year of King Seonjeo's rule, Joseon era). During the Japanese's invasion, the monk, Hyujeong, commanded a militia of monks in mountain to defend the nation.
